

A mysterious relic recalls a time when ice was worthless in New England and priceless in Calcutta, and a fortune awaited the man who figured out how to get it from one place to the other without its melting

Everybody invited everybody to dinner to taste claret and beer cooled by the ice.”

In Martinique, Thdor demonstrated how to make ice cream and showed how iceboxes could keep food fresh.

